

WHAT WOULD KEVIS DO: SCENARIO PLAYBOOK

What Would Kevis Do? — Scenario Playbook

What it is: Decision playbook for the messy middle — so you don't need a 1:1 call for standard situations.

How to use: Find your scenario → do the steps in order → stop when the next action is scheduled. Pair with the pivot tree and scorecard.

Voice check: Demographic arbitrage. RPM math. Winning formats. Owner OS. No fake scarcity.

Keep scenarios 1–6 on your desk for month one.

Scenario 1 — One video goes viral, then silence

Symptoms: Video 3 = rocket. Videos 4–8 = polite claps. Panic to “new niche.”

What Kevis would do

1. Do not pivot the niche yet. Virality proved demand; silence usually means you left the format.
2. Tear down the viral video: hook promise, packaging, length, payoff timing, Suggested neighbors.
3. Write the winning format in one paragraph (`05` planner lock).
4. Make the next 5 as variations of that format (new object, same psychology).
5. Use cross-niche arbitrage: find the same viewer desire in adjacent niches; steal structure, not topics (Rick `1Kw2eIDH61A`).
6. If after 10 format-faithful uploads nothing repeats → then open pivot tree.

Failure mode: Chasing a new niche every outlier (trial-and-error tax).

Scenario 2 — Monetized but RPM is junk

Symptoms: YPP badge dopamine; revenue humiliating; ~$2 RPM energy.

What Kevis would do

1. Celebrate nothing. Open revenue tab.
2. Check audience demographics / Suggested neighbors — are you still in teen land?

3. Scorecard A1–A3. If trap zone → PIVOT (self-improvement lesson).
4. Do not “upload harder” into a broken unit economy.
5. Costume blank account 3 days toward 55–65 homeowners; pick PASS niche; new first 10.

Failure mode: Staying loyal to a niche because you already spent months.

Scenario 3 — Slow start / 43 views / impression drip

Symptoms: Daily uploads, empty room energy, comparing yourself to highlight-reel students.

What Kevis would do

1. Separate account trust / impressions from niche quality.
2. Confirm scorecard still PASS.
3. Packaging sprint: 5 title/thumb variants on the same idea using outlier refs (1of10-style workflow from teaching).
4. Keep edit cost low so you can afford spins.
5. At ~7 posts: check impression heuristic (park vs alive).
6. Remember: some boards are 90-day grind; some are day-3 rockets — both appear in teaching. Judge with the tree, not Instagram.

Failure mode: Becoming the editor to “try harder” (freelancer trap / second job).

Scenario 4 — Niche doubt after watching a guru niche list

Symptoms: New PDF every week; shiny object; unfinished pipelines.

What Kevis would do

1. Close the guru tab.
2. Re-open your scorecard sheet and costume homepage screenshot.
3. Only entertain a new niche if it scores ≥ 20 and beats your current on A1–A3 + C1.
4. One niche in production. Research queue is separate blank account — not your upload channel’s brain.
5. Information trap = enemy. Building > learning.

Failure mode: Eternal research phase.

Scenario 5 — Editor issues (late, flashy, expensive)

Symptoms: $80 quotes; MrBeast jump cuts; missed deadlines; you start editing “just this once.”

What Kevis would do

1. Re-run $30 test. If niche can’t be cut for $20–$30, niche may be wrong — not “hire Hollywood.”
2. Job post must filter: calm living-room documentary, reply with code word (see leftovers pattern).
3. Fire fast. Keep a bench of 2 editors.

4. You never become the backup editor for more than one emergency video.
5. Later: Editor Hiring bonus system (paid) — templates for scale.

Failure mode: DIY trap — saving cash by spending months of life.

Scenario 6 — Full-time job, family, only nights free

Symptoms: Guilt; weekend binge production; burnout week 3.

What Kevis would do

1. Redefine success as Owner OS: 15–30 focused minutes on high leverage (ideas, packaging, light QA).
2. Outsource edit + (optionally) VO.
3. Cap research to costume protocol minutes — no rabbit holes.
4. Proof patterns: Noah kept the job; Pamela after kids asleep; Sasha new at 53 — systems > hero grind.
5. If the channel needs 4 hours every night, you built a second job — rebuild the machine.

Failure mode: Quitting the job emotionally before the asset works (enemy framing: second job trap, not the 9–5 itself).

Scenario 7 — Copyright / demonetization scare

Symptoms: Strike, claim, or friend got banned on AI slop.

What Kevis would do

1. Pause uploads.
2. Audit footage sources. Kill anything unlicensed.
3. Prefer public domain / stock / public proceedings with narration value.
4. Dramatized crime: restore disclaimer firewall.
5. Health/finance: educational framing only.
6. If the niche requires gray footage to work → PIVOT — low entry barrier includes legal sleep.

Failure mode: “Everyone does it” as a strategy.

Scenario 8 — Want to scale a second channel

Symptoms: Channel 1 working; greed/fear of platform risk.

What Kevis would do

1. Don't starve channel 1's format engine.
2. Isolate accounts / business hygiene (consultation tape themes: don't casually twin AdSense risk).
3. Second niche must PASS scorecard independently.
4. Reuse hiring + scripting systems; don't reinvent.
5. HeadStart path: installation + editor placement if capital — optional.

Failure mode: Two half-fed channels, zero winners.

Scenario 9 — Script sounds like AI slop

Symptoms: Comments notice; you cringe listening; retention dips mid-video.

What Kevis would do

1. Stop prompting “write a YouTube script about X” from zero.
2. Map a winner transcript’s structure (pacing clone).
3. Force research value-add (ScriptWriter bonus doctrine).
4. Read aloud once — if a tired 35-year-old asks “what does that mean?”, rewrite.
5. Ban vibe words; keep picture words.

Failure mode: Shipping faster by sounding like everyone else.

Scenario 10 — “I’m too old / too late / too saturated”

Symptoms: Comparison; 2023 niche tweets; paralysis.

What Kevis would do

1. Open emergence comps (young channels, views > subs).
2. Saturation is often your homepage, not the market — costume.
3. Point to Sasha-type proof: new, 50+, monetized fast with systems.
4. You don’t need a secret niche; you need a decision system.
5. If capital + no time: HeadStart DFY. If not: this toolkit is enough to start Season 1 Episode 1.

Failure mode: Waiting for permission.
